

Can an ELD be set to 15 minute time intervals?

Q: Paper logs were basically run in 15 minute time intervals, can an ELD be set that way as well?

A: No. The ELD will capture all entered duty statuses and there is no minimum amount of time that these statuses must or should be engaged. While longstanding industry and enforcement practices may have relied upon minimum intervals of 15 minutes in handwritten records of duty status (RODS), an ELD provides a more accurate accounting of drivers' time. This should not be construed to indicate that the activities electronically recorded as less than 15 minutes are suspect, only that the time actually required to complete the task may be less than what had been traditionally noted in the paper RODS.
